CHEEKTOWAGA – The Cheektowaga Police assisted an intoxicated man to his grandmother’s house in Kaisertown after he brought beer into a pub that refused to serve him.

The bar at 2460 Clinton Street called the police to check on the man around 7:43 pm Monday after he entered the pub intoxicated according to police records.

The bartender refused to serve the man. He left mumbling to himself and walked westbound on Clinton Street with his dog. The police checked the area but could not find the subject.

The man returned to the pub around 8:03 pm bringing beer he purchased from a store. He stated someone took his dog and refused to leave when asked.

The police found the man’s dog tied to a pole outside of a nearby Consumers Beverages a few minutes later. The pup was picked up by the man’s family.

The intoxicated man was transported to his grandmother’s house on the 2100 block of Clinton Street in Kaisertown.
