Wazi died one year ago after a heart condition.

Western New Yorkers gathered on Friday to remember a dog that helped protect their community for years. Wazi's partner talked about his impact on the community, which showed with how many people turned out for the service.

"I had no idea, how many people, the lives he's touched," Officer John Doskocz said. "From young kid: first started seeing him to now they're teenagers, it's amazing to see how well that he impacted every

During the service, a brick on the walkway outside the SPCA was dedicated in Wazi's honor.
