SLOAN – Cheektowaga Police have detained two people in connection to a stolen vehicle investigation Monday afternoon according to a police source.

The incident started around 4 pm at the intersection of Atlantic Avenue and Reiman Street. One person bolted from a black Ford pickup truck at the intersection while a patrol officer was investigating a stolen vehicle.

A foot chase ensued down Reiman and onto Michael Avenue where the patrol officer lost the subject. Several other officers quickly descended on the area and established a perimeter.

The subject was later seen running west through yards and another officer started chasing the subject on Atlantic Avenue. He was detained a short time later.

A second subject remained in the pickup. Both were taken to police headquarters for further questioning. The pickup was impounded to a secure police facility.

The police officer who initiated the foot chase required first aid. An ambulance crew checked on the officer. He remained on duty according to our source.

Cheektowaga Chronicle will follow up with the police Tuesday morning to see what charges the subjects are facing.
